

Business Planning for people working in the Bio Health sector

13 December 2007

9.00 – 5.00pm

The Nowgen Centre
29 Grafton Street
Manchester, M13 9WU

Business planning skills are needed by everyone developing their ideas to create health products in order to implement and deliver business objectives. A good plan not only gives clarity and focus but helps define strategy and manage resources. It also gives confidence by lowering the investment risk.

Topics covered : why planning is important, intention of a plan, developing a vision, planning tools and how to use them, financial analysis, developing action plans.

alanboyd consultants has developed a series of leadership management training specifically for people working in biotechnology or life science industries, designed to address issues faced in this unique and the highly specialised field.

Cost including refreshments and lunch:
£250 (industry) £150 (NHS and University)

20% discount if you book for the whole series by 31 August 2007
